Michigan Was Prime Target For Both Presidential Hopefuls

WHO WILL GET MICHIGAN'S 20 electoral votes for president after the Nov. 8 general election? Whether it's Republican nominee Richard M. Nixon or Democratic hopeful John F. Kennedy, the winner will have worked hard for the prize. Both have made Michigan a major target of campaigning — both in person and by delegation.

The political party's aim in an election is, of course, to elect as many of its nominees as it possibly can.

But since a coattail ride on the popularity of a ticket-leading presidential candidate counts just as much as a win by personal vote-getting power, the drums beat loudest for the man shooting for the White House.

A candidate for the Congress, governorship, or any other office might, in other words, pick up votes through the appeal of a popular presidential candidate.

At any rate, Michigan will have a good look at both Kennedy and Nixon by election day. Each planned three or four visits to the state.

In addition, a flock of lesser lights from each party has made the Michigan tour.

Included in the prestige-laden group were United States senators of both political faiths, a fair number of U. S. representatives, several cabinet members and some relatives of the candidates.

Republican vice-presidential nominee Henry Cabot Lodge missed one invitation to speak in Benton Harbor, but was to appear later. Democratic Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson, Texas, who holds the nod for the number two spot on his party's ticket, had failed to schedule a Michigan visit two weeks before the election.

The multitude of distinguished visitors was a mixed blessing to Capitol newsmen.

They haven't lacked for news to cover, but on some occasions, they have needed to be in more than one spot at a time.

Local party workers also have had their problems. They're the ones responsible for turning out a crowd of the appropriate size when a party bigwig drops by.

PERHAPS HENRY FORD, the father of the assembly-line technique and best known for the car that bears his name, should also get credit for inventing the super-market.

This interesting observation has been offered by a pair of Michigan State University men in an University publication.

Stanley S. Hollander and Gary A. Marple contend that Ford's "commisseries" of the period, of the 1920's incorporated many of the features of the modern supermarket.

A Ford commissary in Highland Park, Mich., sold $6 million worth of merchandise in 1926.

The average American supermarket in 1957 was $1.81 million, Hollander and Marple said. Ford emphasized rapid turnover, low prices, checkout cashiers, self-service, pre-packaging of bulk goods and many other features common in the markets today.

But, Hollander and Marple said, Ford actually had little influence on the supermarket of today.

Tests showed the black and yellow to be the best colors, but the Department felt these would be too easily confused with the traffic directions.

They settled on the red and white stripes as the next best thing.

Bill Mosher spent Wednesday and Thursday last week in Grand Rapids on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Babbitt spent the weekend of October 29th visiting their sons Howard and Arnold and families in Kalamazoo.

On their way they stopped to visit Mrs. Minnie Babbitt at the House of Faith, Charlotte, finding her looking very well and coming a long time.

motion for dismissal of the charges under advisement and the defense then presented its case.

Mr. Vaughn said he did not spend the money but held it and that he had advised Mr. Dittmer of such withholding to compel the promised accounting.

His testimony brought out the fact that after he had been arrested on Mr. Dittmer's complaint, and had been held one night in Grand Rapids jail, he received two checks from Sparks Broadcasting Co. for gross commissions in the amount of $301, admittedly due him.

On the day of the trial for embezzlement in Circuit Court Mr. Vaughn said Mr. Dittmer handed him another Sparks Broadcasting Co. check for commissions due him in the gross amount of $73.50.

In his summation later, Attorney Cadwell pointed out that on the day of Mr. Vaughn's arrest, Mr. Dittmer and the Sparks Broadcasting Co. had evidence that they owed Mr. Vaughn considerably more than he was withholding from them. He argued that the defendant could not be charged with embezzling money rightfully due him, when his duties included the collection of payments on the contracts he had sold.

Ron Stratton, former WHGR employee now working for a Big Rapids radio station, was another defense witness.

Mr. Stratton returned voluntarily to testify that he had had similar difficulty in obtaining an accounting and payment of commissions from Mr. Dittmer and the company.

On cross-examination by the defense, Mr. Dittmer testified that he was ordered by the Secretary and Vice-President of the Sparks Broadcasting Co., in a conference telephone conversation, to swear out a complaint against Mr. Vaughn.

Mr. Dittmer testified on cross-examination that he had signed a "blank" complaint — that there was no name, charges or any other writing on the complaint.

After Mr. Vaughn's arrest at his place of employment at Rose common, on the evening of October 10, a request on his behalf was made to Justice Pearson's Court on October 11 and upon refusal of immediate release on property bonds, he furnished a surety bond at a cost to him of $100.

At the close of the presentation of the defense case, Attorney Cadwell repeated the motion made earlier at the close of the plaintiff's case that Judge O'Keefe hand down a directed verdict of not guilty, and Judge O'Keefe so ruled.

What Is A "Legitimate Business Expense"?

It is a "legitimate business expense," deductible for income tax purposes, for a company to advertise its product or service in the hope of inducing consumers to buy. This, obviously, is necessary if an enterprise is to survive in our highly competitive age.

But it is not a "legitimate business expense" for a company to advertise in the hope of preventing itself from being destroyed by socialist government.

This, in essence, is the ruling of the Federal Power Commission and the Internal Revenue Service in the case of business-managed utility companies which have used advertising to oppose socialization of their industry. The federal agencies have held that the ads deal with political rather than business or economic problems. Hence, they say, the cost is not deductible. Inasmuch as corporation taxes are now 52 per cent on a business of any size, this means that the utilities cannot present their side of a life-or-death controversy save at heavy tax penalty.

A proposed Congressional bill—the Boggs bill—would give business the right to conduct campaigns, through advertising and in other established ways, which have the purpose of favoring or opposing legislation and related problems, and to carry the cost as a legitimate business expense. If Congress has any regard for fundamental rights and liberties, it will pass it.

down our achievements and to play up those of Russia.

That's easy to do if statistics alone are used without explanation and elaboration. But it's a case where statistics, even though they don't lie, do delude.

Vance Packard makes this plain in his new book, "The Waste Makers." He points out that "Russia's rate of economic growth . . . is less remarkable than that of Mexico, Japan or West Germany. Compared with that of the United States, its percentage of annual growth of output seems impressive simply because it is starting from a lower base and because it is an underdeveloped country trying to catch up with an overdeveloped one. Economist W. Allen Wallis, special assistant to the President observed in 1930, 'Even if Russian growth rates continue higher than ours, the absolute gap between us will continue to increase for some time to come. There is no possibility that the Russian economy will overtake ours at any time in the visible future—certainly not in this century.'"

In most fields of production, Russia is building from a base which we passed 30, 40 or 50 years ago. Under these circumstances, mere percentage growth figures are almost meaningless. There's nothing to justify selling the U. S. short.

Interesting Events In Grayling 23 Years Ago

INTERESTING ITEMS OF NEWS GATHERED FROM THE FILES OF THE AVALANCHE OF 23 YEARS AGO

November 11, 1937

Interest in the annual Kiwanis election of officers for the year 1938 drew out an unusually large attendance. Besides the election of officers and directors the club was privileged to hear a very interesting and instructive address on the federal social security laws. In the election, vice-president Charles E. Moore, who also is president of the Winter Sports, Inc., declined to become a candidate for the presidency. This was very much regretted, however, there is such a thing as heaping too much responsibility upon an individual, no matter how much it may be desired to have him serve. Dr. J. Fred Cook was unanimously elected president for the coming year which begins January 1, 1938. Dr. Cook has been an active and regular attendant and we predict for him a most successful year. Chris W. Olsen was elected vice-president. The following were elected members of the new board of directors: Frank Sales, Dr. S. Stealy, Harley Russell, O. P. Schumann.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Speak Up, Doc

Doc Turner was up playing cribbage with Smiley Roberts the other day when, long about supper time, Mrs. Roberts invited him to stay and have a bite with them.

Now, Doc had sniffed a cherry pie coming out of the oven and his mouth was watering. But what did he say? "No, thanks," says Doc. "Some other time, then," says Mrs. Roberts, and back she goes into her kitchen.

Well, next day Smiley ran into Doc on the street. Smiley said, "You missed some good cherry pie last night, Doc."

"Don't I know it," says Doc. "I sure wanted to stay but your missus only asked me once!"

From where I sit, Mrs. Roberts has the right ideas about persuading people. Give folks credit for knowing their own minds. For instance, I never coax anyone to join me in a glass of beer. And if they don't try to talk me into drinking their favorite beverage, we'll get along fine. You can't persuade folks to be good neighbors, but you can "invite" them.

Find Local Safety Record Not As Good

(Special to the Avalanche)

New York, Oct. 25 — Is Crawford County a safer place in which to live, from the standpoint of accidents, than most other communities in the United States?

What are the odds against a local person's being involved in some sort of an accident in any given year.

Evidence produced at the recent National Safety Congress, held in Chicago, shows that some areas are more accident-prone than others.

The variations are due to a number of factors, among them the kind of housing, the proximity to water, the types of industry, the amount of driving done and the effectiveness of public safety programs.

Data has just been released by the U. S. Public Health Service giving the vital statistics for all parts of the country for the year ending January 1, 1959.

They show that there were 3 fatalities due to accidental causes among residents of Crawford County in the year with 2 of them attributed to motor vehicles. Excluded are local mishaps involving non-residents.

Considering the population of the county, the total is relatively high.

It represents a rate of 68 accidental deaths per 100,000 population.

This was greater than the average reported by the Public Health Service for the United States, a rate of 52 per 100,000. For the East North Central States it was 48 per 100,000.

For each accident that ends in a fatality, there are 101 others that cause disabling injuries that require people to give up their normal activities for at least one day, states the National Safety Council.

The dollars and cents cost of this toll is enormous. Last year it amounted to $14 billion, according to the council's estimate, taking into account wages, medical fees, property destroyed and drop in production.

Crawford County's proportionate share of this cost, using the average loss per accident, would come to $428,000.
